Photo 8: Illustrative View westwards along entrance to Landowne House, showing avenue of trees through the grounds and 'parkland' type landscaping.

Photo 9: Illustrative View westwards across grounds south of Lansdowne House, showing the transition from the more 'parkland' type setting to open agricultural land beyond. No visual perception (in summer) of the settled edge of Knowle or Dorridge due to intervening strong linear tree cover.

Photo 11: Illustrative View of more open agricultural land north of the 'parkland' grounds at Lansdowne House. Avenues of trees still present along old informal access routes and significant trees present in fields. No visual perception (in summer) of the settled edge of Knowle or Dorridge due to intervening strong linear tree cover.

Photo 12: Illustrative View from within grounds of Lansdowne House looking eastwards towards the Warwick Road, showing significant tree cover and 'parkland' type landscape
